

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for electroplating is provided in which a copper layer is patterned using a resist. A barrier layer lies below the copper layer and is used to supply the electroplating current in regions without the copper layer. The method makes it possible to produce high-quality soldering bumps.